ORDER

19 Pending before the Court is Defendant Lisa Borodkin's Motion to Dismiss (Doc.
20 102) Xcentric's Verified First Amended Complaint (Doc. 55). For the reasons stated 21 below, the Motion is granted.<sup>1</sup>

22 FACTUAL BACKGROUND

23 Plaintiff Xcentric Ventures, LLC is an Arizona company that operates the website 24 www.ripoffreport.com ("Ripoff Report"). As its name suggests, Ripoff Report is an 25 online forum where users can read and post messages about businesses that purportedly 26

27 <sup>1</sup> The Parties' requests for oral argument are denied because the parties have had 28 an adequate opportunity to discuss the law and evidence, and oral argument will not aid the Court's decision. See Lake at Las Vegas Investors Group v. Pac. Malibu Dev., 933
F.2d 724, 729 (9th Cir. 1991).

1 have “ripped off” consumers in some manner. (Id. ¶ 2.) Xcentric claims never to have 2 removed a post. (Id. ¶¶ 13-17.) Edward Magedson is the manager of Xcentric and the 3 editor of Ripoff Report. (Id. ¶ 8.) Defendant Lisa Jean Borodkin is an attorney who 4 represented Defendant Asia Economic Institute, LLC (“AEI”), a California company that 5 published current news and events online from the year 2000 until June 2009. (Id. ¶¶ 3, 6 5.)

7 I. THE 2010 LAWSUIT

8 On January 27, 2010, AEI and its principals, Raymond Mobrez and Iliana 9 Llaneras (the “AEI Plaintiffs”), brought an action against Xcentric in state court in 10 California (the “California Action”). (Id. ¶¶ 27-28.) The action was subsequently 11 removed to the United States District Court for the Central District of California. (Id.)
 12 The initial complaint asserted twelve claims against Xcentric and Magedson, including 13 RICO racketeering claims predicated on extortion and wire fraud. (Id.) These claims 14 arose out of the AEI Plaintiffs’ allegations that Xcentric deliberately manipulated the 15 Ripoff Report so that negative posts about AEI rose to the top of internet searches, and 16 then used its Corporate Advocacy Program (“CAP”) to coerce AEI into paying Xcentric 17 money in exchange for giving AEI more favorable treatment. See Asia Econ. Institute v.
 18 Xcentric Ventures, LLC, No. CV 10-1360 SVW (PJWx) 2010 WL 4977054 (C.D. Cal.
 19 July 19, 2010) (AEI I).<sup>2</sup> The AEI Plaintiffs contended that the use and description of the 20 CAP claimed amounted to extortion and wire fraud.

21 The AEI Plaintiffs were initially represented by Daniel Blackert, and from April 22 19, 2010, until the conclusion of the case, they were also represented by Borodkin. (Doc.
 23 55 ¶ 30.) At a hearing on April 19, 2010, the California District Court ordered the AEI 24 Plaintiffs to produce “a declaration describing meetings with any representative of 26 <sup>2</sup> The Court takes judicial notice of California District Court’s first summary 27 judgment decision because it is a document “whose contents are alleged in a complaint 28 and whose authenticity no party questions, but which are not physically attached to the [plaintiff’s] pleading,” Kniesel v. ESPN, 393 F.3d 1068, 1076 (9th Cir.2005) (quoting In

1 defendant regarding extortion[]” by May 3, 2010. (Id., Ex. B.) At this time, the Court also 2 bifurcated the action to allow consideration of the extortion claims first. (Id.) On May 3, 3 Mobrez and Llaneras filed their declarations. (Id. ¶ 32.) Mobrez stated that in the course 4 of several telephone conversations, Magedson told him that the lawsuits were futile and 5 that it would cost AEI $5,000 and a monthly fee to get the negative comments off of 6 Ripoff Report. (Id., Ex. C ¶¶ 6-14.) He allegedly told Mobrez that the only way to repair 7 the damage was to enter the CAP program, and that “the more money a company made, 8 the more they would be charged.” (Id.) Llaneras listened in on the conversations between 9 Mobrez and Magedson and affirmed in her declaration that the conversations occurred as 10 Mobrez described. (Id. Ex. D.)

11 At his May 7 deposition, Mobrez reaffirmed his testimony. (Doc. 55 ¶ 39.)
12 Counsel for Xcentric then disclosed to Mobrez and Llaneras that all phone conversations 13 between Magedson and Mobrez had been recorded and that the recording flatly 14 contradicted the statements made in the Mobrez and Llaneras affidavits that Magedson 15 asked for money in exchange for removing content. (Id. ¶¶ 40-41.) Xcentric’s counsel 16 sent a letter to Borodkin and Blackert, in which he stated that Mobrez and Llaneras had 17 perjured themselves, all the claims contained in the complaint were groundless, and that 18 Borodkin and Blackert themselves would face liability for continuing to pursue baseless
19 claims. (Id., Ex. E.)

20 On May 20, 2010, Mobrez and Llaneras filed corrected affidavits. (Id. ¶¶ 48-49, 21 Exs. F, G.) The corrected affidavits did not describe any telephone conversations where 22 Magedson threatened AEI or asked for money. (Id., Ex. F.) Mobrez, however, maintained 23 that he received telephone calls from someone at Xcentric who told him it would cost 24 “five grand” to join the CAP. (Id. ¶ 5.) He blamed a mix-up between telephone and email
25 conversations for the incorrect statements in his previous declaration. (Id. ¶ 6.) Borodkin 26 and Blackert allegedly participated in preparing these declarations. (Doc. 55 ¶ 50.)

27 Borodkin continued to represent the AEI Plaintiffs in prosecuting their California 28 case. (Id. ¶ 52.) On July 9, 2010, one day before oral argument was to take place on

1 Xcentric's summary judgment motion, Borodkin filed a Rule 56(f) motion to allow 2 further discovery to take place. (Id. ¶ 53.) On July 19, 2010, the District Court denied the 3 Rule 56(f) motion, granted Xcentric's motion for summary judgment as to the RICO
4 extortion claims, and dismissed the RICO wire fraud claims (which had not been pursued 5 to that point) with leave to amend. (Id. ¶ 56.) See AEI I, 2010 WL 4977054 at *26.

6 Borodkin then filed a First Amended Complaint ("California FAC") for the AEI
7 Plaintiffs on July 27, 2010. It asserted claims for wire fraud under RICO, RICO 8 conspiracy, unfair business practices, defamation, intentional and negligent interference 9 with prospective economic advantage, negligent interference with economic relations, 10 deceit, and fraud. (Doc. 103-1, Ex. 8; Doc. 55 ¶ 57.)<sup>3</sup> The California FAC alleged that 11 Xcentric caused the negative reviews to appear and disappear—depending on whether a 12 company had entered the CAP—when an internet user entered the company's name into 13 a search engine, and focused on the alleged discrepancy between how the CAP functions 14 and Xcentric's statements on its website about never removing content. (Id. ¶¶ 22-23, 25, 15 62-68, 138-69.) The California FAC also faulted Xcentric for concealing the allegedly 16 exorbitant fees charged for participation in the CAP. (Id. ¶¶ 22-24.) It asserted that these 17 actions, taken together, constituted wire fraud and provided the predicate act for the 18 RICO claim. (Id. ¶¶ 22-23, 25, 62-68, 138-69.)

19 Xcentric again moved for summary judgment on September 27, 2010. (Doc. 55 ¶ 20 59.) Two hours before the summary judgment hearing on November 1, 2010, Borodkin 21 filed another 56(f) motion on behalf of her clients, seeking a continuance of the hearing 22 to allow for further discovery relating to James Rogers, who was previously a personal 23 assistant to Magedson. (Id. ¶ 60; Doc. 103-1, Ex. 11 at 199-219.)<sup>4</sup> In a declaration 24 attached to the motion, Borodkin stated that she tried to arrange the deposition of Rogers

 3 Xcentric alleges that these statements made in the Rule 56(f) motion were false and 4 misleading. (Doc. 55 ¶¶ 61-62.) The District Court vacated the hearing. (Id. ¶ 63.)

10 II. THE CURRENT ACTION

11 On July 18, 2011, Xcentric filed a Complaint in this Court, bringing claims for 12 malicious prosecution and aiding and abetting tortious conduct against AEI, Borodkin, 13 Mobrez, Llaneras, and Blackert. (Doc. 1).<sup>6</sup> In response to this Court's order that it 14 provide a more definitive statement, Xcentric filed its First Amended Complaint on 15 March 16, 2012. (Doc. 55.) Two claims are asserted against Borodkin: (1) wrongful 16 continuation of civil proceedings and (2) aiding and abetting tortious conduct. She now 17 moves to dismiss Xcentric's FAC under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim. She has 18 also filed a Request for Judicial Notice (Doc. 103), in which she asks this Court to take 19 notice of various documents mentioned in Xcentric's FAC.

20 DISCUSSION

21 I. LEGAL STANDARD

22 To survive dismissal for failure to state a claim pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil 23 Procedure 12(b)(6), a complaint must contain more than "labels and conclusions" or a 24 "formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action;" it must contain factual 25 allegations sufficient to "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Bell Atl.

26
 27 <sup>5</sup> The Court likewise takes judicial notice of the May 4, 2011 decision of the California District Court referenced in Xcentric's FAC.

28 <sup>6</sup> Default judgment has been entered against Blackert and AEI. (Doc. 126.)

1 Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). While “a complaint need not contain 2 detailed factual allegations . . . it must plead ‘enough facts to state a claim to relief that is 3 plausible on its face.’” Clemens v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 534 F.3d 1017, 1022 (9th Cir.
4 2008) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). “A claim has facial plausibility when the 5 plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that 6 the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678
7 (2009) (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). The plausibility standard “asks for more than a 8 sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id. When a complaint does not 9 “permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has 10 alleged—but it has not shown—that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Id. at 679 (internal 11 quotation omitted).

12 When analyzing a complaint for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), “[a]ll 13 allegations of material fact are taken as true and construed in the light most favorable to 14 the nonmoving party.” Smith v. Jackson, 84 F.3d 1213, 1217 (9th Cir. 1996). However, 15 legal conclusions couched as factual allegations are not given a presumption of 16 truthfulness, and “conclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences are not 17 sufficient to defeat a motion to dismiss.” Pareto v. FDIC, 139 F.3d 696, 699 (9th Cir.
18 1998). On a motion to dismiss, the court may consider only allegations contained in the 19 pleadings and documents referred to in the complaint. Colony Cove Props., LLC v. City
20 of Carson, 640 F.3d 948, 955 (9th Cir. 2011); Hal Roach Studios, Inc. v. Richard Feiner 21 and Co., Inc., 896 F.2d 1542, 1555 n.19 (9th Cir. 1990) (in considering a motion to 22 dismiss, a court may consider only the material in the pleading and “material which is 23 properly submitted as part of the complaint”).

24 The general rule that a court may not consider evidence or documents beyond the 25 complaint in the context of a Rule 12(b)(6) Motion to Dismiss has two specific 26 exceptions. First, a court may consider documents “whose contents are alleged in a 27 complaint and whose authenticity no party questions, but which are not physically 28 attached to the [plaintiff’s] pleading,” Knievel, 393 F.3d at 1076 (alteration in original).

1 Second, a court may take judicial notice of “matters of public record outside the 2 pleadings.” Mack v. S. Bay Beer Distribs., Inc., 798 F.2d 1279, 1282 (9th Cir. 1986), 3 overruled on other grounds by Astoria Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass’n. v. Solimino, 501 U.S. 104
4 (1991). While matters of public record such as prior court proceedings, are proper 5 subjects of judicial notice, the court may take notice only of the authenticity and 6 existence of a particular order or pleading, not the veracity or validity of its contents. Lee 7 v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 690 (9th Cir. 2001); Walker v. Woodford, 454 F.
8 Supp. 2d 1007, 1022 (S.D. Cal. 2006) aff’d in part, 393 F. App’x 513 (9th Cir. 2010).
9 Even when considering a public record, however, judicial notice is limited to those facts 10 that are “not subject to reasonable dispute.” Fed. R. Evid. 201(b).

11 II. ANALYSIS

12 A. Wrongful Continuation of Civil Proceedings

13 Presumably because Borodkin entered her representation in the California Action 14 after the initial complaint was filed, Xcentric brings a claim against her for “wrongful 15 continuation of civil proceedings,” a species of malicious prosecution. This tort allegedly 16 occurred in California and consequently California law applies. Under California law, 17 “[m]alicious prosecution is a disfavored action. . . . This is due to the principles that favor 18 open access to the courts for the redress of grievances.” Downey Venture v. LMI Ins. Co., 19 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142, 150 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998). California law requires the narrow 20 construction of a malicious prosecution claim to ensure that “litigants with potentially 21 valid claims will not be deterred from bringing their claims to court by the prospect of a 22 subsequent malicious prosecution claim.” Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Olier, 765 P.2d 23 498, 502 (Cal. 1989).

24 Three elements must be pleaded in a malicious prosecution claim against an 25 attorney to survive a motion to dismiss: “a plaintiff must demonstrate that the prior action 26 (1) was commenced by or at the direction of the defendant and was pursued to a legal 27 termination in his, plaintiff’s, favor; (2) was brought without probable cause; and (3) was 28 initiated with malice.” Id. at 501 (internal quotations omitted). Borodkin contests the first

1 element only with respect to the wire fraud claims, which she asserts were voluntarily 2 dismissed. As for the remaining claims, she argues that Xcentric has failed as a matter of 3 law to show that the California Action was brought without probable cause and was 4 maliciously continued by Borodkin.

5       There are two ways a plaintiff can show a defendant lacked sufficient probable 6 cause to justify bringing an action: “A litigant will lack probable cause for his action 7 either if he [1] relies upon facts which he has no reasonable cause to believe to be true, or 8 [2] if he seeks recovery upon a legal theory which is untenable under the facts known to 9 him.” Sangster v. Paetkau, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 66, 75 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998). The standard is 10 an objective one and inquires “whether any reasonable attorney would have thought the 11 claim to be tenable.” Paiva v. Nichols, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 838, 848 (Cal. Ct. App. 2008)
12 (citing Sheldon Appel, 765 P.2d at 511-12). The existence of probable cause is a question 13 of law for the court to decide. Sheldon Appel, 765 P.2d at 503.<sup>7</sup> The burden to show a 14 lack of probable cause is high, even presumably on a motion to dismiss, because 15 California law gives a malicious prosecution defendant the benefit of the doubt: “[i]n 16 making its determination whether the prior action was legally tenable, the trial court must 17 construe the allegations of the underlying complaint liberally in a light most favorable to 18 the malicious prosecution defendant.” Sangster, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 75. All the defendant 19 needs is some rational basis for the claims pursued. Accordingly, an unsuccessful claim is 20 hardly an automatic basis for a malicious prosecution suit. Paiva, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 849.
21 Indeed, “[p]robable cause may be present even where a suit [is] merit[less].” Jarrow
22 Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche, 74 P.3d 737, 743 n.13 (Cal. 2003) (internal quotations 23 omitted).

24       Xcentric advances two categories of allegations to support its claim that Borodkin 25 pursued the California Action, despite knowing it lacked probable cause: factual and 26 procedural. First, it asserts that Mobrez and Llaneras, Borodkin’s clients, made

27
28       <sup>7</sup> In its Response, Xcentric incorrectly argues that the existence of probable cause is a subjective inquiry improper for resolution at the 12(b)(6) stage.

1 statements in their declarations that Xcentric demonstrated were false. (Doc. 55 ¶¶ 32-2 50.) Borodkin allegedly should have known the extortion claim was factually groundless
3 because Mobrez and Llaneras filed corrected affidavits after Xcentric's counsel informed 4 them of the tape recording. Xcentric also claims that the extortion claim was baseless 5 because AEI had no revenues. (Id. ¶51.) Second, Xcentric cites two instances where 6 Borodkin filed last-minute Rule 56(f) motions, and asserts that these motions contained 7 false statements, served to prolong the litigation, and reinforced the baseless character of 8 the AEI Plaintiffs' claims. (Id. ¶¶ 53-55, 60-63.)

9 A court must examine the entirety of the cause of action brought by a malicious 10 prosecution defendant because "[a] claim for malicious prosecution may also apply to a 11 defendant who has brought an action charging multiple grounds of liability when some, 12 but not all, of the grounds were asserted without probable cause and with malice." 13 Sycamore Ridge Apartments, LLC v. Naumann, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 561, 572 (Cal. Ct. App.
14 2007). The specific factual allegations contained in Xcentric's FAC focus on the 15 litigation of the extortion claims and the filing of the Rule 56(f) motions. Its allegations 16 regarding the other claims are limited to general assertions that those claims were 17 "groundless." Nevertheless, the Court examines each class of claims brought by the AEI 18 Plaintiffs and pursued by Borodkin in the California Action.

19 1. RICO Extortion Claims

20 Almost the entire thrust of Xcentric's FAC in this action concerns how Borodkin 21 litigated the extortion claim, which the California District Court considered first and 22 separate from the other claims. In essence, Xcentric asserts that Borodkin lacked probable 23 cause because the extortion claim "relie[d] upon facts which [s]he ha[d] no reasonable 24 cause to believe to be true." Sangster, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 75. It argues that Borodkin 25 should have known the California Action was groundless because Mobrez and Llaneras 26 made false statements in May 2010 regarding supposed conversations with Magedson.
27 (Doc. 55 ¶¶ 32-50.) According to the terms of the Complaint, however, Borodkin assisted 28 Mobrez and Llaneras only with their corrected affidavits. (Id. ¶ 50.) Nevertheless,

1 Xcentric claims that the fact that Mobrez and Llaneras revised their May 2010 2 declarations after learning that the telephone conversations between Mobrez and 3 Magedson had been taped should have alerted Borodkin that there was no truth to their 4 extortion claims. (Id. ¶¶ 39-48.) The affidavits had been filed in response to the 5 California District Court’s order to file declarations “describing meetings with any 6 representative of defendant regarding extortion[]” by May 3, 2010. (Id. ¶ 30, Ex. B.)

7 “In general, a lawyer is entitled to rely on information provided by the client.”
 8 Daniel v. Robbins, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683, 698 (Cal. Ct. App. 2010) (internal quotations 9 omitted). But “[i]f the lawyer discovers the client’s statements are false, the lawyer 10 cannot rely on such statements in prosecuting an action.” Id. Without knowledge that her 11 client has made specific false statements, an attorney “may, without being guilty of 12 malicious prosecution, vigorously pursue litigation in which [s]he is unsure of whether 13 h[er] client or the client’s adversary is truthful, so long as that issue is genuinely in 14 doubt.” Morrison v. Rudolph, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747, 752 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002), 15 disapproved on other grounds by Zamos v. Stroud, 32 Cal. 4th 54, 65 (2004).

16 Xcentric’s allegation seems to be that Borodkin discovered that the declarations of 17 Mobrez and Llaneras were false and nevertheless proceeded with the extortion claim, 18 relying on the content of the false declarations. At least two problems exist with that 19 contention. First, the FAC does not allege that Borodkin was involved in any way with 20 the declarations containing the initial, allegedly false statements. According to the FAC, 21 her involvement really began with preparation of the corrected affidavits. (Doc. 55 ¶ 50.)
 22 Even if the Court were to infer from the FAC that Borodkin—who had entered an 23 appearance for the AEI Plaintiffs (Id. ¶ 30)—was involved with the preparation of the 24 first declarations, the only basis supplied by Xcentric in its FAC for Borodkin’s 25 knowledge of the falsity is that Xcentric’s counsel subsequently told Mobrez and 26 Llaneras about the tape (without giving it to them) and sent a letter to Blackert and 27 Borodkin that accused their clients of lying. “But a letter from a litigation adversary 28 merely suggesting it disagrees with the verity of the allegations in the lawsuit is not

1 sufficient to put the lawyer on notice of the falsity of the client's allegations.” Daniels, 2 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 698. Nothing is alleged that would show Borodkin knew that 3 everything her client was saying was false. Second, the original complaint in the 4 California action relied on communications beyond the conversations between Mobrez 5 and Magedson to support the extortion claim, such as emails. (Doc. 1, Ex. A ¶¶ 28-38, 6 61-63.) Even if Borodkin somehow knew that everything her clients said was false, she 7 relied also on documentary evidence for the extortion claim.<sup>8</sup>

8 In its Response, Xcentric argues that the RICO claims were without probable 9 cause because Borodkin could not have proven economic damages. (Doc. 107 at 2-3.) 10 There is a tangential statement in Xcentric’s FAC that references the fact that “during 11 nine years of existence, AEI’s total revenues were $0. (Doc. 55 ¶ 51.) Yet the absence of 12 revenue or profit does not preclude the existence of economic damages. Therefore, 13 Xcentric’s allegation regarding damages does not support a claim that the California 14 Action lacked probable cause. The FAC thus contains no plausible basis for an allegation 15 that Borodkin “relied upon facts which [s]he ha[d] no reasonable cause to believe to be 16 true.” Sangster, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 75.

17 Xcentric can nevertheless survive a motion to dismiss by alleging that Borodkin 18 sought “recovery upon a legal theory which is untenable under the facts known to h[er].”
 19 Id. California law “construe[s] the allegations of the underlying complaint liberally in a 20 light most favorable to the malicious prosecution defendant.” Sangster, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 21 at 75. Xcentric’s FAC alleges that Borodkin proceeded on an RICO extortion theory 22 because such a theory would enable the AEI Plaintiffs to avoid the limitations imposed 23 by the Communications Decency Act (“CDA”), 47 U.S.C. § 230(c)(1). (Doc. 55 ¶¶ 14-24 19.) The initial California Complaint supports this claim: the AEI Plaintiffs alleged that

---

 26 <sup>8</sup> The Court also notes that Borodkin apparently abandoned any reliance after the 27 May 2010 episode on oral conversations to support the extortion claim: “Further, it is 28 clear from Plaintiffs’ Opposition that Plaintiffs are not relying on the substance of the phone calls to support their claims that Defendants engaged in attempted extortion.
 Instead, Plaintiffs appear to rely solely on the emails Magedson sent to Mobrez and the content on Defendants’ website.” AEI I, 2010 WL 4977054 at *14 n.14.

1 conversations between Xcentric and Mobrez demonstrated that Xcentric engaged in 2 extortion. (Doc. 1, Ex. A ¶¶ 57-68.) See AEI I, 2010 WL 4977054 at *14.

3 Extortion requires that Xcentric threatened “to do an unlawful injury [to the AEI
4 Plaintiffs]; to accuse [the AEI Plaintiffs] of any crime; to expose, or to impute [to the AEI
5 Plaintiffs] any deformity, disgrace or crime; or . . . to expose any secret [of the AEI 6 Plaintiffs].” Cal. Penal Code § 519. The first California Complaint alleged that the CAP, 7 in exchange for a fee, promised “to change[] the negative listings on search engines into a 8 positive along with all the Reports on Rip-off Report.” (Doc. 1, Ex. A ¶ 62.) The AEI
9 Plaintiffs, represented by Borodkin, thus argued that the presentation of the CAP 10 program, along with its fees, amounted to a form of extortion. Moreover, although 11 Mobrez had corrected his declaration, he maintained that someone from Xcentric had told 12 him it would cost “five grand” to join the CAP. (Doc. 1, Ex. F ¶ 5.)

13 In Hy Cite Corp. v. badbusinessbureau.com, a decision of this Court denied a 14 motion to dismiss an extortion claim that had a similar foundation. 418 F. Supp. 2d 1142, 15 1149-50 (D. Ariz. 2005) (“Here, Defendants operate a website. Plaintiff alleges that 16 Defendants create and solicit false and defamatory complaints against businesses, but will 17 cease this conduct for a $50,000 fee and $1,500 monthly retainer. Remedying the 18 publication of false and defamatory complaints, which Defendants allegedly created and 19 solicited, does not give Defendants the right to collect fees.”).<sup>9</sup> Nevertheless, the 20 California District Court eventually rejected all of Borodkin’s theories for lack of 21 evidence. See AEI I, 2010 WL 4977054 at *16-19 (“[N]one of the communications 22 Defendants sent to Plaintiffs contain any suggestion that the CAP Program (or the 23 payment of fees) would result in negative reports being taken off the website or that such 24

25 <sup>9</sup> Borodkin’s other cases are not on point. In Giordano v. Romeo, 76 So.3d 1100 26 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2011), the court ruled that Xcentric had immunity under the 27 Communications Decency Act. In its dicta, the court referred to Xcentric’s business 28 practices as “appalling,” id. at 1102, but that does not provide support for a claim that Xcentric was engaged in extortion. The other case, Leavitt v. Yelp! Inc., Nos. C-10-1321 EMC, C-10-2351 EMC 2011 WL 5079526 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 26, 2011), likewise addresses questions of immunity under the CDA.

1 reports would no longer be featured in search results. The offer to help Plaintiffs restore 2 their reputation and facilitate resolution with the complainants in exchange for a fee does 3 not constitute a threat under California Penal Code § 519.”).

4 Based on the allegations in Xcentric’s FAC and the documents of which the Court 5 has taken judicial notice, the Court cannot say that Borodkin’s legal theory was so absurd
 6 that no reasonable attorney would have advanced it. The Hy Cite court found the theory 7 at least tenable on a motion to dismiss, although the California District Court ultimately 8 found the evidence lacking in the case of Borodkin’s clients. Moreover, even an absence 9 of legal authority—or presence of contrary decisions—does not amount to a lack of 10 probable cause. See Franklin Mint Co. v. Manatt, Phelps & Phelps, LLP, 109 Cal. Rptr.
 11 3d 143, 182 (Cal. Ct. App. 2010) (“[A] claim is not untenable merely because there is no
 12 existing authority that indisputably establishes its legal viability. Indeed, a claim is not 13 necessarily untenable even if the existing authority is directly adverse, provided there is a 14 tenable basis to argue for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.”) 15 (emphasis in original). As the California Supreme Court has recognized, a “court must 16 properly take into account the evolutionary potential of legal principles.” Sheldon Appel, 17 765 P.3d at 511 (emphasis in original).

18 Xcentric alleges that Borodkin’s July 9, 2010 Rule 56(f) motion for additional 19 discovery demonstrates that she lacked a legal basis for her claim. (Doc. 55 ¶¶ 53-55.) 20 Xcentric does not, however, allege sufficient facts to make this plausible. Since, as has 21 been determined above, Borodkin did not lack probable cause to proceed with the claim, 22 there is no reason to assume that she was not entitled to discover facts that would support 23 her claim. One of the principal purposes of discovery is for an attorney to uncover facts 24 that establish her client’s claims. Xcentric does not allege that the discovery sought by 25 Borodkin in her Rule 56(f) motion in some way makes it plausible that she should have 26 known her clients never had any claim to begin with, or that Borodkin had to somehow 27 have become aware that they had no claim.

28 Xcentirc’s allegations simply do not describe how that filing affected the California District Court's disposition of the case in a way that harmed Xcentric, other than to assert that it served "to prolong the action and compound the caused" and that Borodkin "accused XCENTRIC, Magedson, and their counsel of a variety of improper conduct." (Id. ¶¶ 53-54.) In fact, three paragraphs later, Xcentric states that the California District Court issued its summary judgment decision a mere 10 days later. There is no indication that Xcentric was harmed in any way by the motion, so the allegation concerning the timing of the Rule 56(f) motion is insufficient of itself to support a claim for malicious prosecution. The theory presented in the AEI Plaintiffs' first California Complaint had some support. That Borodkin's client in the end could not produce sufficient evidence to support their extortion theory does not show that their attorney maliciously pursued the claim. Nor does the July 9 Rule 56(f) Motion support a claim for malicious prosecution. Consequently, the Court concludes that the FAC does not provide sufficient facts to plausibly allege that Borodkin lacked probable cause under California law to bring the extortion action on behalf of the AEI Plaintiffs.

2. RICO Wire Fraud and Unfair Business Practices

The next class of claims was for RICO wire fraud and unfair business practices. These claims were pursued in the AEI Plaintiffs' FAC only after the California District Court granted summary judgment on the RICO extortion claim. Borodkin contends first that Xcentric's FAC fails to state a claim for malicious prosecution as to the wire fraud claim because Borodkin voluntarily dismissed the RICO/wire fraud claim. The first element of a malicious prosecution action is that the underlying proceeding was pursued to a legal termination in the plaintiff's favor. See Bertero v. Nat'l Gen. Corp., 529 P.2d 608, 613 (Cal. 1974). Nevertheless, the California District Court's final summary judgment decision did not specify which claims it rejected and which claims Borodkin dismissed. See AEI II, 2011 WL 2469822 at *1 ("Plaintiffs' claims under RICO have previously been rejected by the Court or dropped by Plaintiffs.") On a motion to dismiss, the Court accepts as true Xcentric's contention that the claims were all pursued to a legal termination in its favor.

1 Xcentric's FAC asserts only that Borodkin knew these allegations were "entirely 2 groundless" without alleging any facts about how or why Borodkin should have known 3 the factual basis for the claims was false. (Doc. 55 ¶¶ 29, 78.) Thus the only inquiry is 4 whether Borodkin's wire fraud theory was untenable. Sangster, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 75.
 5 Unlike the extortion claim, Xcentric's FAC does not contain any allegations as to why 6 the wire fraud claim was "groundless."

7 Borodkin made numerous allegations on behalf of her clients in the California 8 FAC concerning the way Ripoff Report manipulated HTML coding for members of the 9 CAP and how Ripoff Report's presentation of that information to the public amounted to 10 fraud. (Doc. 103-1, Ex. 8 ¶¶ 22-23, 25, 62-68, 138-69.) Even if the wire fraud claim was 11 ultimately terminated in favor of Xcentric, Borodkin did not lack probable cause to bring 12 the claim. California legal authority existed that justified Borodkin's wire fraud theory. In 13 Leavitt v. Yelp!, the Northern District of California left the door open to the kind of claim 14 brought by Borodkin, albeit under California's unfair competition statute, Cal. Bus. &
 15 Prof. Code § 17200:

16 Plaintiffs do not allege . . . that Yelp violated § 17200 by falsely stating its 17 posting of reviews is based on bona fide neutral criteria. Indeed, it could be 18 argued that . . . harm . . . stems from an alleged misrepresentation about 19 Yelp's posting criteria and failure to disclose its alleged practice of 20 manipulating ratings in favor of those who advertise. Claims of 21 misrepresentation, false advertising, or other causes of action based not on 22 Yelp's publishing conduct but on its representations regarding such 23 conduct, would not be immunized under [the Communications Decency 24 Act, 47 U.S.C. § 230(c)(1) ("CDA")].

25 2011 WL 5079526 at *9. Moreover, the California FAC attached various screenshots and 26 descriptions of processes that the AEI plaintiffs marshaled in attempt to show the very 27 behavior described in the Leavitt dicta. That factual support may have been insufficient to 28 demonstrate a wire fraud—and, indeed, the wire fraud claims do not appear to have made it to the summary judgment stage—but the claims were not so lacking in probable cause

1 to justify an action for malicious prosecution.<sup>10</sup>

2 Once again, Xcentric cites an “eleventh hour” Rule 56(f) motion as evidence that 3 Borodkin did not have probable cause to pursue the wire fraud claim on behalf of her 4 clients. (Doc. 55 ¶¶ 60-63.) This time, Xcentric alleges that Borodkin “intentionally 5 sought to mislead the Court a[s] to [the necessity of the last minute filing].” (Id. ¶ 62.)
 6 Standing alone, this allegation, taken as true, does not support the claim that the AEI 7 Plaintiffs’ wire fraud case lacked probable cause. Xcentric does not allege that the 8 discovery Borodkin sought was unavailing, irrelevant, or otherwise amounted to 9 harassment. The only injury it alleges is that its attorney flew out to California for the 10 hearing and had to fly back. (Id. ¶ 63.) That inconvenience, while undoubtedly annoying, 11 cannot shoulder the weighty burden necessary for a malicious prosecution action. In 12 short, Xcentric’s FAC fails to sufficiently allege facts that would justify its malicious 13 prosecution claim against Borodkin for the claims of wire fraud and unfair business 14 practices.

15 3. Remaining Claims

16 The residual claims brought by Borodkin on behalf of the AEI Plaintiffs in the 17 FAC are the derivative claims: defamation, intentional and negligent interference with 18 prospective economic relations, negligent interference with economic relations, deceit, 19 and fraud. (Doc. 103-1, Ex. 8.) Again, Xcentric’s FAC does not set forth how or why 20 Borodkin should have questioned the truthfulness of the factual basis for the claim; just 21 that her claim was untenable.

22 With the wire fraud claim gone, the California District Court ruled that the 23 remaining claims were barred by the CDA because Xcentric was the information service 24 provider and not the publisher of the content. See AEI II, 2011 WL at *5-8. The court

 26 <sup>10</sup> Xcentric attaches to its Response a colloquy between Borodkin and the 27 California District Court from a hearing on July 12, 2010. (Doc. 107-1.) That hearing and 28 its contents, however, are not referenced in Xcentric’s FAC and therefore the Court declines to take judicial notice of it. Furthermore, the Court declines to convert Borodkin’s 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss into a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment.
 Consequently, the Court will not consider the contents of the attachment.

1 noted “that this very issue has been litigated by several district courts to date, where 2 nearly identical allegations against Xcentric (and Magedson where applicable) based on 3 Ripoff Report postings have been barred under the CDA.” Id. at * 5 (citing GW Equity,
 4 LLC v. Xcentric Ventures, LLC, 2009 WL 62173 (N.D. Tex. 2009); Intellect Art
 5 Multimedia, Inc. v. Milewski, 2009 WL 2915273 (N.Y. Sup. 2009); Whitney Info.
 6 Network Inc. v. Xcentric Ventures, LLC, 2008 WL 450095 (M.D. Fla. 2008); Global 7 Royalties, Ltd. v. Xcentric Ventures, LLC, 544 F.Supp.2d 929 (D. Ariz. 2008)).

8 At the time the California Action was being litigated, however, a plaintiff had 9 obtained injunctive relief from the author of a Ripoff Report that required the author to 10 take down the report. Yet the Northern District of Illinois held that the judgment obtained 11 against the author was not a basis on which the plaintiff could force Xcentric to take 12 down the report because Xcentric had not yet been made a party to the lawsuit. See 13 Blockowicz v. Williams, 675 F. Supp. 2d 912, 915-16 (N.D. Ill. 2009), aff’d, 630 F.3d 563
 14 (7th Cir. 2010). In Borodkin’s November 2010 Rule 56(f) filing, referenced by Xcentric 15 in its FAC, Borodkin asserts that

16 Defendants say that Plaintiffs should sue the authors, not them. However, 17 Defendants actively seek to hide the identity of authors and will not 18 cooperate with court orders against the authors, anyway. Plaintiffs agree 19 that they have a remedy against the third-party authors of the original 20 Reports about them, and have named such third-parties as John Doe 21 defendants. However, it is necessary to join Defendants on those claims if 22 Plaintiffs want Defendants to be bound by any orders of this Court granting 23 relief. Defendants have taken the position in other cases, notably 24 Blockowicz v. Williams, 09-cv-3955 (N.D. Ill.) (now pending on appeal in 25 the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit after the oral 26 argument on September 29, 2010) that if Defendants are not joined as 27 parties in a defamation case, they will not have had notice and an 28 opportunity to be heard, and therefore are not bound by a Court order to take down the defamatory Reports. In other words, it would do no good to sue “John Does” if Defendants will not cooperate with any takedown orders against the John Does.

(Doc. 103-1, Ex. 11 at 211.) It is certainly plausible that Borodkin may have included the

1 derivative claims against Xcentric to preserve her clients' ability to get the content 2 removed if it went after the authors of the content. That was the position she took at 3 summary judgment stage. Under the very generous standard for probable cause, Borodkin 4 had a tenable legal theory for including these derivative claims in its case, even when 5 those claims have never worked against Xcentric alone. Xcentric's FAC contains no 6 factual allegations as to why Borodkin lacked probable cause as to the derivative claims.

7       There is no need to consider the third element of an action for malicious 8 prosecution because Xcentric's FAC and the documents cited therein fail to state that 9 Borodkin lacked probable cause to pursue each claim of the California Action. Almost all 10 of the allegations in Xcentric's FAC center on the extortion claim, but, for the reasons set 11 forth above, those allegations do not support a malicious prosecution claim. As to 12 Borodkin's legal theories for the other claims, Xcentric's FAC does not contain the barest 13 of allegations stating why Borodkin lacked probable cause to bring such claims.
14 Accordingly, the claim for wrongful continuation of civil proceedings is dismissed. The 15 Court notes that the California District Court denied Xcentric's motion for Rule 11 16 sanctions, further indication that, while Borodkin certainly pursued a losing cause, the 17 claims she brought on behalf of her clients were not so lacking in probable cause as to be 18 utterly frivolous. See AEI II, 2011 WL 2469822 at *11.

19       B.     Aiding and Abetting Malicious Prosecution

20       The second claim Xcentric brings against Borodkin is that she "provided 21 substantial assistance or encouragement to [the other Defendants] with the intent of 22 promoting their wrongful conduct[,] specifically the malicious commencement and/or 23 continuation of the Asia Litigation." (Doc. 55 ¶ 88.) Xcentric's FAC does not contain any 24 additional allegations that support a claim for aiding and abetting liability separate from 25 those that ostensibly supported an action for wrongful continuation of civil proceedings.
26 Accordingly, the aiding and abetting claim is dismissed.

27     ///

1 CONCLUSION

2 After considering the allegations of Xcentric's FAC and the documents of which 3 the Court took judicial notice, Xcentric has failed to state a claim against Borodkin.
4 Accordingly, all claims against her are dismissed.

5 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Borodkin's Motion to Dismiss (Doc. 102)
6 is GRANTED. The Clerk of Court is directed to terminate Defendant Lisa Jean Borodkin 7 from this action.
